

In this fast changing, relentlessly challenging Global Business Environment, choices for career advancement can be endless. Even highly capable executives, who are typically efficient at their work, are sometimes confused when it comes to their own personal business goals. What these people need, to help focus their energies, is a personal coach. It can be helpful for senior executives, as well as younger employees, to receive feedback from a third party: this is often how they realize there may be certain habits or behaviours that are sabotaging their prospects for growth.

Executive Communication offers such intensive services, coaching entrepreneurs and senior executives from corporations small and large. Coaching is offered by experienced specialists with modern business awareness, gained from experience of over 10 years in the International Business and Language Training Industry. In their own careers and as coaches for other executives, these tutors are proven to be effective in developing leadership, business plans, productivity, performance and profitability. Executive Coaching can help with such issues as clarifying goals, enhancing one's effectiveness at one's current position, increasing one's wealth by intelligent financial planning and endless other subjects.

Our acclaimed business coaches can work on a personal, one-to-one basis or, if need be, they can design entire seminars for larger groups of executives. For people who live in Athens, Greece, coaching services can be offered on site and the Executive Communication facilities. For those who live in the USA, Asia, Australia, or other European countries, executive coaching can be offered online.